it is well known and accepted that medications must first be shown to be safe in animals before they are given or injected into human beings specifically, it prevents a degraded form of testosterone called dihydrotestosterone from accumulating in prostate tissue.